

Removing the established business relationship qualification from the new regulations governing unsolicited fax contacts with members and potential members of associations creates undue restrictions and unnecessary burdens on the operations of such organizations. The right of individuals to associate with others who share common interests is fundamental to all, and should not be restricted by creating the burden of giving prior consent prior to receiving faxed information from his formal peer organization.